

Questions You May Have Regarding the High Holy Days at Larchmont Temple

Why must I bring my tickets?

Because we have limited space, people attending High Holy Day services in the sanctuary are asked to show their tickets in order to assure that members of the Temple and their guests have adequate seating. Asking worshippers to show a ticket is also a reasonable precautionary security measure designed to serve as a deterrent to anyone considering disrupting our worship service.

What is the policy for purchasing guest tickets?

Members in good standing may request guest tickets for the following persons: married children (and their spouses) of Larchmont Temple members; single children of Larchmont Temple members who do not live at home; parents of Larchmont Temple members regardless of whether or not they live permanently in the home of the member. The cost is $100 per person for one High Holy Day or $150 per person for both High Holy Days. Members in good standing of other URJ congregations may attend services at no charge upon receipt by Larchmont Temple of a written request for tickets from their URJ congregation.

What is the significance of receiving an Aliyah for the Holy Days?

Aliyot are given as a way to honor members of the congregation for their service to and participation in congregational life. Please notify the Temple office immediately if you are able or unable to accept an aliyah that has been offered to you.

What if I have received an Aliyah but I would prefer to be in a different worship service at the same time?

If you have been offered an aliyah that conflicts with your worship preferences please notify the office and the ritual committee will do its best to re-assign you with another honor.
